Large Animal Vaccinations

The rain has continued to fall and the growth in the grasses is great! So what you say?

These are ideal conditions for Clostridium to flourish. Have you vaccinated your cows / sheep?

Most farmers get at least one vaccination into their young animals and then the follow up booster injection is missed. To fully vaccinate your young animals is really important

When you start to move stock you may see random, sudden deaths.

REMEMBER: Black leg is a killer! Pulp kidney is a killer! Tetanus is a killer!

Please do not forget your young stock - Get out there and vaccinate them. This includes your yearlings and heifers.

Adult cattle will require a 7 in 1 vaccination booster at dry off time. This will give up to 16 weeks maternal protection from the colostrum to their new born calves

Desexing of Larger Breeds of Dogs

A research by the UK Royal Veterinary College has revealed that neutering some breeds of dogs under six months of age may be more prone to early onset urinary incontinence than other breeds. Urinary incontinence affects around 3% of bitches. This study collected data from the clinical records of over 72,000 bitches

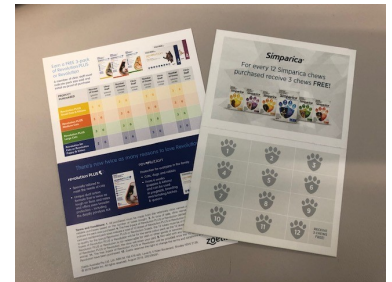

There are many benefits to neuter a bitch but this study suggests that early age neuter should be carefully considered in the higher risk breeds which include Hungarian vizslas, Dobermans and Weimaraners and bitches over 30kg.

(from The Veterinarian, Oct 2019)

NOTE: There is a very interesting article but remember that this only affects 3% of large breed bitches. This means that almost all other bitches are better spayed before six months of age. Young dogs are far easier to neuter. They recover faster and have far less post surgery complications.

We said goodbye to Dr Peter last month. Peter, Aimee and their dog Maverick have headed back home to Perth. I am sure the weather will be much better than here!
